Marginal Column By NISSIM REJWAN

SO far, the only tangible results of last week's revolt in Mosul have been the deepening of the rift on the one hand, and an appreciable increase in the Iraqi Communist influence on the other. The two developments are not unconnected: in attempting to forestall Nasser's moves against his regime, General Kassem has had to move more heavily on the Communists, who, apart from being excellent organizers of mass demonstrations, are the only wholeheartedly anti-Nasser group in Iraq. Active help given by the U.A.R. to the ill-equipped and ill-trained Shaw, was the final proof of Nasser's real intentions, and this in turn has strengthened the Communist contention that Iraq should follow a totally different course from that of Cairo. Repeated attempts at reconciliation made in Iraq by the Communists and non-Nasserist—nationalist elements have finally come to naught.

ONE cannot help suspecting that this state of affairs suits the Communists and the Nasserists equally well, and that the only losers in this game are General Kassem and his followers, who have been trying to over a middle course between the two groups. For Nasser, the more that Kassem can be shown to lean on the Communists the better; did he not claim that the only alternative to his brand of Arab nationalism was Communism? Having short-circuited Syria from an imminent take-over by the Communists a year ago, it seems logical that he be allowed to do the same in Iraq. (The gist of an address which he gave in Damascus on Friday—the third in three consecutive days—was that the danger of Communism is no longer confined to Syria, but it may spread from there to other Arab countries). The Communists, on the other hand, can be only glad to see their power enhanced, as good strategists they seem to be exacting a high price for their support of Kassem in his hour of need.

THERE is a tendency to consider Nasser's attitude toward Baghdad self-defeating in that it is serving to drive Kassem into the arms of the Communists, as far as it may tend to estrange him from Moscow and Moscow's indispensable aid. This is not necessarily an underestimate Nasser's subtlety. "Positive Neutralism," which is Cairo's chief ideological weapon in the drive for an Arab union, can be maintained only if one of two things obtain—if it is accepted by both world blocs, or if it is maintained by a country strong and rich enough to stand the pressures of both sides. In Nasser's case both these elements are absent, since his neutrality has been accepted as valid only by Moscow and since, in addition, he failed to gain control of the oilfields in Iraq and Southern Arabia. In the end, Soviet moral support and material aid proved rather suffocating, especially when the long-awaited merger with the new Baghdad regime failed to materialize.

WHAT, then, is Nasser trying to do? His concentrated personal attacks on Kassem may seem mad as they tend to increase rather than decrease the danger of Communism in Iraq. Yet there is too much method in Nasser's tactics for them to be considered madness. Two examples will illuminate his stand. In his speech on Friday, Nasser seemed unduly apprehensive of possible Communist danger in Syria; he said Kassem and the Baathists were trying to establish a Communist Fertile Crescent from Baghdad and Damascus. There is no confirmation of this claim, and Kassem and the Communists seem too preoccupied with putting their respective houses in order to worry about Syria. Nasser's "Fertile Crescent" seems a remote enough likelihood at the present.

MORE instructive, perhaps, was another speaker in Damascus on Friday: the anonymous author of the Friday Sermon in the Bab Umayya Mosque spoke of "International Communism"—a term which until a few months ago was subject for laughter of Cairo and Damascus Radicals. These and other utterances by Nasser's followers offer ample proof that Cairo is trying to get into the West's good books at Baghdad's expense, hoping simultaneously to rescue its positive neutralism and to establish hegemony over Iran. Whether or not this manoeuvre succeeds will probably depend on the outcome of Nasser's present offensive against Kassem's regime. It may well be that a substantial section of Iraqi public opinion—and the Iraqi Army—will not tolerate a prolonged and open breach with Egypt.

Suslov in U.K., May Meet Gov't Leaders

LONDON (Reuters).—A top Kremlin foreign policy expert, Mr. Mikhail Suslov, who flew in on Friday at the invitation of a Labour Party group, is likely to meet Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and possibly Prime Minister Macmillan before he leaves for Washington on Tuesday, informed sources said on Saturday.

Mr. Suslov, who will have informal discussions with Labourites on international topics, including Berlin and Germany, told reporters after he landed. "Spring is in the air. We hope fair weather will set in both in nature and in international relations."

With Mr. Suslov were four other Soviet leaders, including "Pravda" editor-in-chief Mr. Pavel Satukov, a prominent scientist, Mr. Boris Ponomarev, the Chairman of the State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations, and Mr. Leonid Boustev, a trade union leader. Mr. Boustev's visit to North America is seen here as a vital part of Allied consultations preparatory for any early East-West Foreign Ministers conference. The Prime Minister and Mr. Lloyd on Friday returned from Bonn after two days of talks with West German leaders. The talks in Washington are expected to cover Mr. Macmillan's evaluation of Soviet intentions following his visit to Moscow; an appraisal of the prospects of a ministerial conference and any subsequent summit meeting; Western measures to impress the Russians of the determination not to give up rights in West Berlin, and the Anglo-Soviet discussions on a non-aggression pact.

Mr. Eisenhower will make a radio and television broadcast on Monday on Berlin and the general security position of the U.S. and its allies. In Oslo, it was announced that Premier Khrushchev has accepted an invitation to visit Norway in the second half of August.

Dallas Expected Back At Desk in April

WASHINGTON (Reuters).—Secretary of State Dulles made such good progress in the battle against his abdominal cancer that diplomatic sources here expect him to be back at his desk by April. They forecast he would stay there until the Berlin crisis is over, but was not likely to remain Secretary of State for much longer after that.

U.S. Seaman Murdered in Haifa

Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA.—An American seaman, Messman Thomas Keegan, 37, of Massachusetts, was stabbed to death aboard the s.s. Alcoa Pioneer in the port here early on Friday morning.

A cabin-mate, Gale Cooper, 26, of Mississippi, has been charged with murder and will stand trial in the District Court.

Keegan returned to his cabin at 2 a.m. on Friday and found that Cooper had locked himself in. Keegan banged on the door until Cooper opened up, and an argument then started over the locking of the door. The two men came to blows and Cooper allegedly went to the galley and returned with a knife.

Two other seamen tried to separate them, but were unable to prevent Cooper from stabbing his ship-mate in the abdomen. It is alleged, Keegan died on the way to the kibbutz hospital.

Fire from Across Syrian, Jordan Lines, Man Hurt

Jerusalem Post Staff
Syrian and Jordanian soldiers fired on Israeli soldiers across the Jordanian border on Friday morning. A Syrian soldier was wounded in the leg by a Syrian fire while, with two fellow-farmers, he was cutting hay some 300 metres inside Israeli territory.

The group was attacked by three Syrian soldiers. A border police patrol was able to extricate the men only when the Syrian fire stopped, some time later.

At about the same time, a patrol in the Beit Govrin area was fired on by a Jordanian infiltrator. When he failed to heed its call to halt, the patrol fired in his direction. Immediately, other Jordanians fired on the patrol from across the border.

In none of these incidents did the Israeli patrols return the fire and there were no Israeli casualties. Complaints regarding the last incident has been lodged with the Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission.

Yugoslavia Recalls Envoy from Albania

BELGRADE (Reuters).—The Yugoslav Government on Saturday recalled its Minister to Albania and left its diplomatic mission in the formal charge of a junior official.

Informed sources said the move amounted to a freeze in relations with Albania, which President Tito last week accused of warmongering against Yugoslavia.

In an interview with the "Christian Science Monitor," released here on Friday, President Tito said he believed Soviet-American relations were improving, and would continue to improve despite differences in views on various problems.

The Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Ivan Zamochovsky, called on President Tito on Saturday. He is alleged to have said in their first formal meeting since Russia launched a new campaign against Titoism nearly a year ago. The subject of their talk was not disclosed.

There was no dissenting vote but 28 countries (the Soviet bloc and several African states) abstained because they favoured having new elections in the trust territory before independence.

The Assembly went on to recommend that U.N. members recognize the French Cameroons as an independent state on January 1 and recommend its subsequent admission to the U.N.

Rhodesian Clergy Oppose Special Law

BULAWAYO, Rhodesia (Reuters).—Archbishop James Hughes of Central Africa on Saturday condemned measures recently proposed by the Southern Rhodesian Government as "characteristic of the Hitler regime."

He was commenting on the Government's "Unlawful Organizations" bill announced on Saturday which aims at permanently banning the African National Congress and the Southern Rhodesia and includes a section under which a person shall be deemed guilty of being a member of an unlawful organization unless he proves he is not.

In an interview published in the "Bulawayo Chronicle," the Archbishop said: "This is no grave a departure from the traditions of British justice that it can only be termed scandalous."

The Roman Catholic Bishop, Adolph Schmidt, of Bulawayo, also interviewed by the "Bulawayo Chronicle," agreed with Archbishop Hughes, saying "though the present situation is no doubt serious, it does not justify amending the old established rule of 'innocent until proven guilty'."

EOKA Turns In Arms; Grivas 'Will Return'

NICOSIA (Reuters).—One day after EOKA began disarming itself after four years of underground warfare, its leader, Col. George Grivas, told members in a farewell message that he hoped to return one day to Cyprus.

"That day will be the happiest in my life," he said in a lead signed with his pseudonym, Digenis. He announced that he would leave the island soon, but stressed that "a new, peaceful struggle now begins for the worthy fulfillment of everything we achieved with our blood."

On Friday, hundreds of armaments and bombs and thousands of shells and rounds of ammunition were turned in by EOKA at appointed collection points throughout the island. The weapons will become the arsenal of the new independent republic. They were delivered to the authorities in Nicosia, Famagusta, Limassol and Larnaca.

Church bells rang on Saturday as 26 Greek Cypriots released from detention in Britain drove down Ledra St., the former "Murder Mile," shortly after their arrival. Fourteen others from Britain arrived in Rhodes.

French and Soviet Envoys at Side Boker

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The French Ambassador and Mrs. Gilbert and the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Mikhail Boderov, were on Saturday the guests of the Prime Minister and Mrs. Ben-Gurion at Side Boker.

2,000 Killed in Mosul; Tribes Now Mopping Up

Baghdad Fears Clan Feud

Two thousand persons were killed and many wounded in the abortive rising in Mosul last weekend, according to estimates published on Saturday in the Baghdad press.

Travelers from Mosul confirmed these figures and said that armed peasants were still engaged in mopping-up operations after what now appears to have been a full-scale tribal war.

On one side, supporting the pro-Nasser nationalist of Iraq, was the Shammar tribe—hundreds of thousands strong, living on both sides of the Iraq-Syria frontier which it does not recognize.

On the other side were the million-strong Kurds, who oppose a union with the U.A.R. because that would make them an even smaller minority group. The Kurds supported the pro-Communist "peace partisans" whose rally in Mosul sparked off the revolt, and were an important factor in causing it to fail.

The authorities are now concerned to separate the two groups to prevent the possibility of a feud following the reported death of Sheikh Ahmed Ajil, a wealthy Shammar leader whose body was said to have been dragged through the streets when the revolt collapsed last Tuesday.

As the press and radio war between Iraq and the U.A.R. reached a new pitch of vituperation over the weekend, demonstrations in Baghdad and Damascus shouted slogans against Abdul Nasser and Premier Kassem respectively.

During the funeral in Baghdad on Friday of the Mosul Communist leader Kamal Khazanjil, 500,000 persons shouted slogans against Nasser and Tito. Thousands of Syrians lined the streets of Damascus and shouted
